

The Andy Warhol Foundation Arts Writers Grant

2026 GRANT CALENDAR

- Apr 1: Application opens
- May 6: Application closes 11:59pm ET
- Dec 2: Grantees announced

ABOUT THE GRANT

The Andy Warhol Foundation Arts Writers Grant supports emerging and established writers who write about contemporary visual art. Ranging from $15,000 to $50,000 in four categories—articles, books, short-form writing, and translation—the grants support projects addressing both general and specialized art audiences, from short reviews for magazines and newspapers to in-depth scholarly studies. The program also supports art writing that engages criticism through interdisciplinary methods and experiments with literary styles. As long as a writer meets the eligibility and publishing requirements, they can apply.

The translation grant is for book projects about contemporary visual art from other languages into English. For guidelines and eligibility criteria for this grant, please download the translation grant application guidelines.

By “contemporary visual art,” we mean visual art made since World War II. Projects on post-WWII work in adjacent fields—architecture, dance, film, media, music, performance, sound, etc.—will only be considered if they directly and significantly engage the discourses and concerns of contemporary visual art.

APPLICATION

We recommend that you read through this Application Guide before filling out the online application. The eligibility requirements and writing sample criteria vary for each project type.

You may apply for one project per grant cycle. You must choose one project type: Article, Book, Short-Form Writing, or Translation. The application questions are listed on page 6.

To access the application form, go to:

ELIGIBILITY

To be eligible for this grant, an arts writer must be

- an individual;
- applying for a project about contemporary visual art;
- an art historian, artist, critic, curator, journalist, or writer in another field who is strongly engaged with the contemporary visual arts;
- a US citizen, permanent resident of the United States, or holder of an O-1 visa (if your application advances to the final round, you will need to submit current documentation);
- at least twenty-five years of age;
- a published author (specific publication requirements vary for each project type).

An arts writer is not eligible for this grant if they are

- applying on behalf of an organization;
- applying for a project in which their primary involvement will be as an editor;
- a full-time student in a degree-granting program (with the exception of those students who are simultaneously maintaining professional careers as arts writers);
- an artist, writer, or curator writing an interpretive essay on their own practice;
- applying for a project that is primarily fiction, poetry (including ekphrasis), memoir, or screenwriting;
- applying for a project based on a PhD dissertation or MA thesis;
- applying to publish Q&A interviews;
- applying to assemble an archive or database;
- applying for a project on Andy Warhol;
- applying for a project that will be published by a commercial gallery;
- applying for a Creative Capital Award for any project in the same grant year (including as a collaborator);
- applying with the same project for which they have received a Creative Capital Award (including as a collaborator);
- a former grantee of the Arts Writers Grant;
- a current employee, consultant, board member, or funder of Creative Capital or the Andy Warhol Foundation, or an immediate family member of such a person.

FAQs

1. What is the application review process?

All proposals are evaluated on the strength of the writing and the project proposal, as well as the capacity of the applicant to realize the project based on the samples provided and the applicant's publication history.

The review process has two steps. First, each application is reviewed by two outside evaluators. Second, applications with the highest scores advance to a final round in which a panel of outside jurors selects the grantees.

2. Do I need a confirmed publisher to apply?

No. You do not need a confirmed publisher to apply. However, the application includes a question about "potential publishers." Use this space to address what publishers or publications you imagine for your project. You may also use this space to write about more experimental strategies for publication or distribution.

3. What do you mean by "Publication History/Bibliography"?

Your answer to this question should include information about the arts publications that make you eligible for a grant in your chosen category. You may also use this field to highlight publications that are relevant to your proposal. We recommend including publication dates and word counts where applicable.

4. How much does the writing in my application matter?

The eloquence and coherence of your answers to the application questions are important. Although these answers are not technically writing samples, they are considered in the evaluation process and jurors read them carefully.

5. How should I select my writing samples?

Writing samples should demonstrate your strength as a writer and should connect, where possible, to your project proposal. Recent writing samples are encouraged. You may submit an unpublished chapter or an excerpt from your manuscript. We do not recommend submitting interviews. Writing samples do not need to be previously published.

6. What is the difference between the Article and Short-Form Writing categories?

The Article category supports the writing of a single, longform text. The Short-Form Writing category supports the writing of more than one text. If you are applying to write a series of texts (essays, reviews, features, etc.), please apply in the Short-Form Writing category.

For detailed information about each category, please read the Project Type FAQs.

7. Are blog, Substack, or podcast projects eligible for a grant?

You may apply with a Short-Form Writing project for a blog or Substack. You may also apply with a podcast element, but your proposal must clarify how the podcast relates to your writing. Interview projects will not be considered.

8. Can I apply with a collaborator(s)?

You may apply with a collaborator only in the Book category. Only one application per collaboration will be accepted; collaborators must select one member to be the primary applicant and contact. Collaborators must meet the requirements for age and student status. However, only the primary applicant need meet the citizenship requirement. If you have further questions in regard to collaborative projects, please email us at questions@artswriters.org.

9. How can the grant money be used?

The grant aims to give writers time to write. In addition to project expenses, we suggest you pay yourself a "writer's fee" for the period you will be working on your project. Grant money can be used only to cover expenses incurred after you have been awarded the grant. Please review the Grant Funds information before applying.

10. How long is the grant period?

The grant period is one year, beginning in January. Short-Form Writing applicants are expected to publish regularly during this year. For Article and Book applicants, completion dates may extend beyond the grant year, and can vary depending on the project.

WRITING SAMPLE INSTRUCTIONS

Applicants may submit up to three writing samples. The total of all three writing samples combined should not exceed:

- Book: 15,000 words;
- Article: 10,000 words;
- Short-Form Writing: 5,000 words.

All samples must be in English.

Each writing sample must be submitted as a separate PDF. The maximum file size is 10 MB.

We do not accept links to online writing samples.

PDF Formatting

We prefer writing samples that are created in a writing software program and saved as a PDF. If you must use a scan from a magazine, the text must be legible and clear when viewed at 100%. If your scanned PDF is not legible, evaluators are not required to read it.

Writing Sample Information

You will need to provide the following information regarding your writing samples: Title, Description, Date, Publisher, Word Count.

Writing Sample Instructions for Collaborative Projects

The total word count for collaborative projects should not exceed 15,000 words. If you have co-authored texts with your collaborator, please include at least one such text as a writing sample.

GRANT FUNDS

The Arts Writers Grant is intended to cover costs associated with research and writing, not design and production.

Expenses related to the realization of your project can include:

- Writer's fee (money used toward living expenses including childcare);
- Research;
- Travel;
- Image permissions and fees;
- Costs related to editing, transcription, or translation.

Grantees must pay taxes on the grant money they receive. The IRS considers income from grants to be taxable.

Please note that grant funds can only be issued directly to the individual grantee. Funds cannot be disbursed to institutions such as universities.

PROJECT TYPE GUIDELINES

ARTICLE

The Article category supports essays, magazine features, and extended exhibition reviews. Catalogue essays will be considered, with the exception of exhibitions held at commercial galleries. Articles may be published in print or online. A confirmed publisher for a proposed article is not a prerequisite to apply. Article grants are $15,000 each.

Eligibility requirements

Article grant applicants must have published a minimum of one of the following:

- two articles about contemporary visual art of at least 2,000 words each;
- seven exhibition reviews of at least 500 words each.

Writing sample submissions

The total of all three writing samples combined should not exceed 10,000 words.

Article FAQs

Can I apply for an Article grant if I want to write an exhibition catalogue essay?

Articles for catalogues to be published by non-profit institutions are eligible. Articles written for exhibition catalogs published by commercial galleries are ineligible.

Can I apply to write a series of articles?

No. In this category, we do not accept applications for series of articles. If you want to write series of articles, please apply in the Short-Form Writing category.

BOOK

The Book category funds a broad spectrum of book-length publications on contemporary visual art, from general-audience writing to academic scholarship. Book grants are $50,000.

Eligibility requirements

Book grant applicants must

- have been writing professionally about contemporary visual art on a regular basis for at least three years; or
- have previously published a book on contemporary visual art or a related subject; or
- have completed a PhD dissertation on contemporary visual art or a related subject (Note: book project applications based on your PhD dissertation are not eligible).

Writing sample submissions

The total of all three writing samples combined should not exceed 15,000 words.

Book FAQs

What kind of books are funded?

The Book category supports a broad range of books on contemporary visual art, from general-audience writing to academic scholarship. Projects on work in adjacent fields—architecture, dance, film, media, music, performance, sound, etc.—will only be considered if they directly and significantly engage the discourses and concerns of contemporary visual art. Writers working on experimental or nontraditional arts writing are also invited to apply.

Can I include an unpublished chapter from my book project as a writing sample?

Yes. You may submit an unpublished chapter or an excerpt from your manuscript as a writing sample.

Can I apply for a book project to support an edited collection, such as an anthology or a multi-authored catalogue?

No. The book grant does not support edited collections. Anthologies, essay collections, and edited volumes with texts by multiple authors will not be considered.

The Andy Warhol Foundation Arts Writers Grant

Can I apply for a book grant to support a project that collects previously written material?

No. The Arts Writers Grant is intended to support new writing, therefore project proposals to collect previously written materials are not eligible for funding.

Can I apply for a book that I have already written and want to get published?

No. The goal of the program is to support writing during the grant period, so books slated for completion in the grant period are ineligible.

Do I have to include a Table of Contents to apply for a book grant?

Yes. The Table of Contents is helpful for the evaluators to get a better sense of your book proposal. We recommend outlining your book project with a chapter breakdown, or, if your book follows a more experimental or nontraditional form, use this field to articulate how the book will be structured.

What do you mean by “writing professionally”?

By “writing professionally,” we mean that you are writing for print or online publications including but not limited to newspapers, magazines, catalogues, or books. Social media posts do not count as professional writing.

SHORT-FORM WRITING

The Short-Form Writing category supports the ongoing practice of writers who regularly produce short texts that respond to current exhibitions, events, and issues in contemporary visual art. By “short,” we mean texts in the range of 250–1,500 words. By “writers who regularly produce,” we mean writers who on average publish at least one text per month in print or online (magazines, newspapers, blogs, or other independent publishing platforms). Short-Form Writing grants are $30,000 each.

Eligibility requirements

Short-Form Writing grant applicants must have published at least eight pieces of writing related to contemporary visual art of at least 250 words each within the last five years.

Writing samples submissions

The total of all three writing samples combined should not exceed 5,000 words. If all of your writing samples are less than 500 words each and you would like to submit more than three writing samples, please email questions@artswriters.org.

Short-form writing FAQs

If I am applying as a short-form writer, how should I answer the project questions?

Your application must be framed as a project. If you are applying to continue your current practice, present your project in terms of your interests (whether aesthetic, regional, political, theoretical, or some combination thereof). You may also choose to write a project description with a focus on a particular topic, or about the kind of writing you would like to develop.

Is the category designed primarily to support a specific group of short-form writers?

The Short-Form Writing category supports writers writing on all areas of contemporary visual art and at all phases of their careers.

How should I answer the questions about contextualizing my project?

In the field that asks you to “contextualize this project in relation to existing writing on the subject,” you may write about how your short-form writing (i.e. criticism, reviews, reporting, or feature-writing) relates to, or is different from, other arts writing. In the field that asks you to “contextualize this project in relation to your own writing,” write about what you hope to do during the grant period that you were not previously able to do; or, if you are applying to continue your current writing practice, write about how your writing contributes to the discourse of contemporary visual art.
